A high-rise with historical significance, Jinling Hotel epitomizes Nanjing's skyscraper-meets-history persona. Once the tallest building in Nanjing (until the '80s), it's now known as a highly rated hotel for business and casual travelers alike. At $92 a night, it's extremely well-priced for its location at the intersection of two major subway lines, with a posh look and feel and plenty of amenities. Visit the Plum Garden, one of seven restaurants in the Jinling Hotel, and try the much-discussed salted duck.
